FOREWORD

FOR three years the Happy Circus has gone its way, with every performer bearing bravely his bad luck and enjoying his good, sorrowing in his failures and rejoicing in his successes. As the last performance closes and we scatter, each to his own calling, it is our purpose to leave with you a sincere and true record of the days when you were an actor in the rings of the Happy Circus. If this book, in years to come, brings to mind familiar faces and familiar haunts, makes you look back, not sadly, but perhaps a trifle wistfully, to your own Happy Circus days, and arouses in you real joy in having played your part, then our efforts will not have been in vain.

FEBRUARY GRADUATING CLASS

The Senior Class of February, 1929

WHEN Maury opened its doors again in September, 1928, we realized that it was perhaps the last time we would enroll, so our ambitions for the new term were indeed high. Our school life at Maury had been successful, so it was with deep interest and great anticipations that we elected the following officers to carry on the good work begun in other classes:

LORIAN MILLER . . . . . President
WILLIAM GORE . . . . . Vice-President
GLADYS SMITH . . . . . Secretary
ALBERT HESS . . . . . Treasurer
ANNA AMATO . . . . . Representative to "The Commodore"
MISS CATHARINE RIDDLE . . . . . Sponsor

Our fondest hopes were realized when, following the example of the February, 1928, Graduating Class, we had the regular graduation exercises. Under the capable direction of Miss Riddle, we gave the first mid-year Senior play, "A Full House," which was most successful.

As we leave Maury the memories of past days become clearer, our friends seem dearer, and we realize as never before that what Maury has given us will mean much to us in our future life.

Toward the Heights

Now stand we in the foothills of attainment,
More conscious of our strength for having tried
Its 'durance in our steady striving upward;
More gentle toward the plain o'er which we toiled
To reach the heart'ning heights about us now;
Beneath us—plains. About us—hills. And lo!
Above us loom the peaks of lasting fame.
It may be that we see them clearer now
Than e'er we may again, for, having climbed
Thus far, we know there is a subtle change
That comes with Time's fore-shortening. There may be
A darker shadow, more awful being vague,
That rests upon the peaks and deepens shades
From azure to turquoise. Or again, we may
Have treacherous hopes that hide with blushing hues
A crevice where our too-swift feet might fall.
To guard 'gainst these, 'tis now our gift to be
Endowed with sight more crystal-clear than drops
Of water from a deep-born mountain spring.
We see, in all their detail, slopes that must Require of us such labor in ascent
That times will come when we would fain desist,
Till thinking back, our mem'ries call to mind
The view we had from here of summits crowned
By hard-won glory and exultant hearts.

Senior Class History

COMMODORE BILL pushed past Mr. Nolley, who was carrying water for the lions, purchased a ticket of Mr. Bristow, and entered the tent of the "Big Three-Ring Circus." Mr. Games was frantically yelling, "Greatest freak of the season, right this way!" There was hustle and din everywhere. Commodore Bill chased up the grandstand to a seat where he had a full view of everything.

Directly facing him was a huge, empty ring, labeled "Senior, 1928-1929." To the left was a smaller ring labeled "Sophomore, 1926-1927," and to the right was one labeled "Junior, 1927-1928."

Commodore Bill looked with interest at the ring labeled "Sophomore, 1926-1927," which was awakening to the cries of the eager crowd. He saw that Miss Riddle was the very capable Master of this ring, and that Frances Stubbs and Joe Scullion were the main features, assisted by Fannie Brill and Margaret Arthur. Deciding that this troupe was lacking in training and rather green, he directed his attention to the ring labeled "Junior, 1927-1928."

Here also Miss Riddle was rushing about directing and advising. A special feature, "Her Step Husband," was in progress, co-starring Margaret Priest and Bobbie Davis, who were supported by an excellent cast composed of Clara West, Harry Brush, Marietta Credle, Frances Stubbs, and Ray Carroll.

To insure the success of this ring, a committee for its management, composed of Frances Stubbs, Leverett Brown, Elizabeth Dawson and Elwood Wood, had been provided. Commodore Bill realized that this troupe was more experienced than that in the ring labeled "Sophomore, 1926-1927."

The ring facing him, labeled "Senior, 1928-1929," was suddenly ablaze with brilliant lights. The four—Joe Scullion, Ray Carroll, Kitty Cubberly, and Jimmie Wright—to whom the interests of the troupe had been given, were galloping wildly around the ring on jet-black horses, led by the Master, Miss Hamlet, on a snow-white horse. She was holding in her right hand a hoop and in her left a shield, huge replicas of the rings and pins which the members of this troupe alone were worthy to wear. As these performers withdrew, a riotous band composed of Anna Knox, Eddie Blair, Marie Arnold, Albert Hess, Ralph Pierce and Elwood Wood came tumbling forward and staged "A Full House," which was acclaimed with striking approval.

The next number was "The Commodore" business meeting, at which Frances Stubbs was elected Editor-in-Chief of "The Commodore," the annual report of the "Big Three-Ring Circus." Ben Costenbader was elected Business Manager. After this feature the curtain fell, and Commodore Bill slowly wound his way out of the tent, realizing that a thoroughly seasoned troupe had provided an interesting entertainment.

PROPHECY

NORFOLK, VIRGINIA,
April 15, 1944.

DR. BENJAMIN COSTENBADER,
Norfolk, Virginia.

DEAR BEN:

I have often heard you state that you wanted to go around the world. Here is your chance. I have bought the little Dog and Pony Show with which Harry Brush made his money, and I am going to take it on a tour. John Alexander, the great surgeon, is to accompany me, as he needs relaxation after having so much work to do on the persons injured in the wreck of the Elliot, Shepherd and Hoffman Air Service plane. We can rest, as there isn't much work to do with this junior edition of a circus. Manager James Martinez does all the work.

By the way, Ben, I went over to Maury the other day and saw a few old friends. Principal William Cooper, his Assistant, Oliver Cook, and some of the teachers—Vaughan Guillaudeu, Mary Long, and Sarah Saulsbury—graduated from the old school with us.

Well, I guess that's all for the present. Do let me have an affirmative answer on the trip soon.

Your friend,

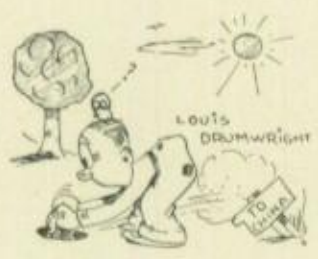
EDDY.

P. S.—Joe Scullion would be going with us, too, but he has a new building under construction, and is too busy.

E. P.

NEW ORLEANS, LOUISIANA,
April 20, 1944.

DEAR JOE,



"THE GREAT TUNNELING WONDER"

I am on a tour of the world with a Dog and Pony Show. Ben Costenbader, who is a celebrated dentist now, and Johnny Alexander are with me. We shipped the show down last week and then waited for Ben and Johnny. They finished their work and came here in a plane owned by the Miller, Hess and Sacks Air Mail Company. My, Joe, it was just like flying. Pilot Jourdan Burke explained the machine to us. The new engine, made by the Foy, Robinett, and Carpenter Company, is a "whizz."

At noon yesterday I met Irvin Shapiro, the famous newspaper man, and his corps of assistants, among whom are Lester Cohen, Margaret Arthur, Alfred Riggin, and Betty Oberndorfer, all members of the Class of '29. We sat in the lobby awhile, and talked about some of our old friends. Randy Perrow, the Supreme Court Judge, Curtis Spence, Governor of Virginia, and Louis Drumwright, the civil engineer, who built the new Hudson River tube, came in for some gossip. We gave our first performance this afternoon and had in our audience William McGarvie, a local theatre manager, who told me that Misses Aspegren, West, and Priest are society women here now. At the night performance I saw the manager and owner of the Page, Cox, and Gornto Candy Company and several of the directors of the Goodman, Beskin, and Hofheimer Mississippi River Boat Company.

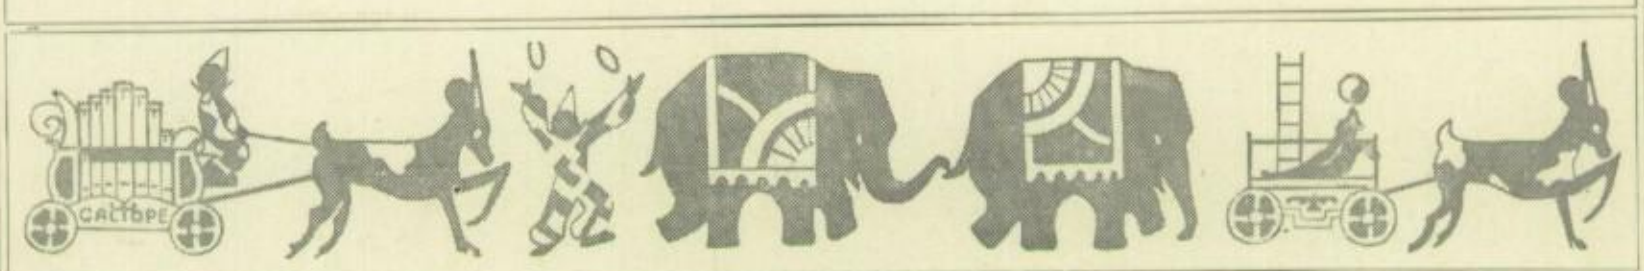
I shall write to you from Denver, if I have time.

Your friend,

EDDY.

P. S.—I hope Governor Facchini of New York gives you that new contract.

E. P.



DENVER, COLORADO,
May 6, 1944.

DEAR JOE,

We gave two big performances yesterday in Denver. Our dogs and ponies worked to perfection, and the audience was a good one. I glanced around yesterday afternoon and saw Leverett Brown, Eugene Wilson, and Carlton Anderson, the great copper men, who had heard that I was running the show. Kendall Briggs, James McPherson, and Melvin Stearn, the famous mining engineers, were there also.

THE ARRIVAL AT DENVER

This morning we went for an air ride among the mountain peaks. We had as companions Davis Nesson and Charles Shelton, New York capitalists. We hit an air pocket on the trip. Nesson suffered a broken arm and Mr. Shelton had a few teeth knocked out. Ben and Johnny made some "fat" fees by attending them and Johnny Jarvis, Withers Utley, and Lindsay Defrees, the Chicago Cotton Exchange men and their wives, our old friends, the Misses Anne Turner, Eoline Roberts, and Katherine Kane, who were also with us.

The show is going to San Francisco tonight, where the manager is to prepare it for a trip abroad with the help of Easter, Ferebee, Cunningham, Shippers.

We are going to Hollywood for a trip.

Your friend,

EDDY.

HOLLYWOOD, CALIFORNIA,
May 10, 1944.

DEAR JOE,

This afternoon we rode on the rubber-neck buses operated by Beamon, Saunders, and Hibbs. I saw Ray Carroll, the famous movie producer and his wife, formerly Miss Frances Stubbs. Ray told me that some of his stars are James Alexander, "Red" Lawrence, and Herbert Fentress, who are expert gentleman lovers, and Vernie Oden, "Liz" Llewellyn, and Nancy Lawler, de luxe leading ladies who are positively wonders at making eyes talk.

RAY CARROL AND FRANCES STUBBS

Ban and Johnny went into Los Angeles this afternoon to see the bank operated by the national banking firm of Adams, Bishop, Geary, and Levick. They certainly were excited, because they saw Misses Barnett and Beckett, the flying stunt artists, fall, and business looked good for a while, but the new parachute invented by Abraham Otto saved them.

Requiescat in pace,

EDDY.

SAN FRANCISCO, CALIFORNIA,
May 15, 1944.

DEAR JOE,

We went out to the broadcasting station here yesterday. The announcer, Emanuel Yavner, told us that some of his performers are Misses Lankford and Lipp, soloists, and Misses Abbitt and Saunders, pianists. They rendered several selections for us. Johnny was terribly excited when he was asked to operate on the throat of Miss Katherine Brush, famous opera star.

"WE WENT FOR A DRIVE 'ROUND THE GOLDEN GATE"

This afternoon we drove through the business section of town and saw Misses Bell and Hayman's Chinese Gift Shop. Later we went for a drive about the Golden Gate. We saw the ferry operated by the Herrington, Steinmetz, and McCoy Company.

We rode out to the docks tonight and saw that our pony show was prepared for its long trip.

I will close now, but I shall send you full particulars of our trip from Honolulu.

Your friend,

EDDY.

P. S.—I saw Fred Harris, who is an attorney in New York, and he told me how he and his associate, W. L. Outten, had handled the case you had against those contractors that failed to pay you on time. I was glad to hear you won the case.

E. P.

HONOLULU, HAWAII,
May 21, 1944.

DEAR JOE,

We left San Francisco on the night of May 14. As we walked up the gang plank, we saw Simpson Jarvis, first mate on the ship. He took us in to see Captain Holt, who greeted us most cordially. After a long talk about old times, we repaired to our rooms.

The next morning when we came out for breakfast, we found a clear, sunny sky. We immediately met Joe Frieden chief steward. He told us that he had just seen Frank Wilson, the professional football player, who is headed for Japan to teach the American game in Mr. Miles' Physical Training School. Several of our former players, who are now coaches—John Duncan, William Browder, and Ralph Pierce—are with him. Shortly after we left, Joe, we met the leader of the ship's orchestra, Harry Ball. He named a few old Mauryites who are playing for him; namely, Misses Maslin Harness, Frances Rogers, Minnie Niehouse and Bessie Tisch. After our talk with him, we arrived safely at the breakfast table. O, gladness unspeakable! Just as we sat down we saw the famous self-made millionairess, Miss Elizabeth Dawson. She had with her her secretary, Miss Huldah Dimmit, and her business associate, Miss E. Swartz. They are traveling about the world to rest from business worries.

After breakfast we went down to see that my show was in good shape. We met Charles Baldwin, the chief electrician, Thomas Greenland, the chief engineer, and Arthur Klevans and George Nowitsky, their assistants. Everything seemed ship-shape in the show, due primarily to the work of Aubrey Hall, second mate.

After we had been wandering about the ship from the radio room, presided over by Harry Polen, chief operator, and Harry Drossman, assistant to the pilot house, where Pilot Edward Lewis and his assistant, James Joyner, were, Johnny was suddenly taken with acute "travelitus," sometimes called "seasickness." Ben and I took him to the ship's doctor. He prescribed rest and a diet. The latter was fine, as Johnny didn't want to eat anyhow. He said that if Johnny didn't get any better he would recommend us to W. W. Cox, Jr., an undertaker in San Francisco.

After lunch, which Ben and I enjoyed, we began wandering about the decks again. We learned from the ship's purser, Frank Cicero, that a New York show was enroute to Europe via the Orient. The girls were anxious to travel. We decided to look the show over when he told us that W. T. Goode was the producer in charge, and Julius Halpern the business manager. When we met them, they told us that their star was Mademoiselle Devereux, formerly Miss Carmean. He named as her understudy Miss Josephine Cannon. Other Mauryites now in the show are Misses Ernestine Griffin, Melba Shafer, and Velma Parkerson.

After the first day the trip was not very exciting, so the crowd of us landed safely here this morning.

I shall write you tomorrow about the sights in this tropical place.

Your friend,

Eddy.

HONOLULU, HAWAII,
May 25, 1944.

DEAR JOE,

We started out to look the place over while the manager was getting the show located. We met, while wandering about aimlessly, Mr. Russell Overton, an old Mauryite, now in the pineapple business. He told us that there were several Mauryites in business here, among them Land Mott, Harry Norris, and William Graham. He also mentioned that there are some old "twenty-niners" engaged in the practice of law, among them Paul DeWitt and Clarence Speight.

"WE LOOKED THE PLACE OVER"

Last night we gave a show. There had not been anything like it here before, so we drew a large crowd.

We shall leave soon, taking a boat for India. I will write the particulars of our trip from there. We hope to be able to purchase some animals to complete the number in a circus, on which I have an option.

Your friend,

EDDY.

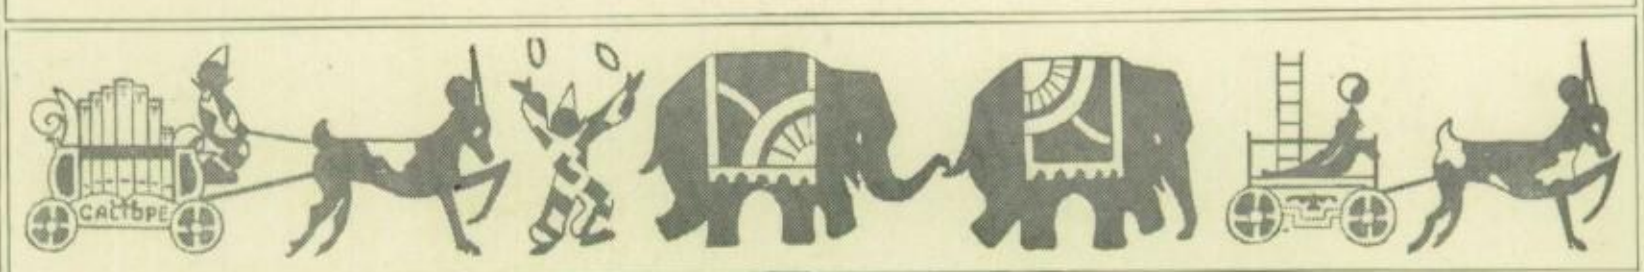
BOMBAY, INDIA,
June 5, 1944.

DEAR JOE,

We were slow getting here, as shortly after leaving Honolulu we were called out of our course to rescue a ship which was bearing the survivors of the latest Chinese massacre back to America. We took a great number from the ship, and as very few of them were going our way, the captain decided to put back to Honolulu with them.

OFF FOR INDIA

There were a great many missionaries among the rescued. We found a goodly number of old high school students among them. The Misses Rosamond Larmour, Catherine Martin, Anne Johnson, and Elizabeth Nelson were all old "twenty-niners." There were other Mauryites who were engaged in welfare work, namely, Misses Barham, Barden, Hamburg, and Gherkin, who had been nurses in hospitals. There were two Maury physicians on the ship, Doctors Baise and White. With these we found the Minister to China, R. Addison, who is returning home for a visit, and Arthur Cannon, Consul in Shanghai. We also met Earl Faber, a mining engineer, who has been working in China for some time.



After the second start from Honolulu, we had a pleasant journey to this city. The show has been so well attended that we are making money fast. We have made enough already to more than pay the show's expenses and buy the wild animals in this country.

We will look the city over tomorrow, and I will write you about it.

Your friend,

EDDY.

BOMBAY, INDIA,
June 6, 1944.

DEAR JOE,

There is an American battleship in port here. We visited Captain Taylor, her commander. He told us that on his last furlough home he met the famous Miss Ethel Bryan, who owns the great jewelry place in Maiden Lane. She has tried the experiment of having all her employees women. The Vice-President of her firm is Miss Marie Arnold, and her Secretary, Miss E. Portlock. She has as her jewelry experts, the Misses Jessie Wright, Bethea Craft, Margaret Tate, and Virginia Dawley. We talked with the captain awhile and then went sightseeing.

THE AMERICAN RUBBER COMPANY

As we were walking through the streets we saw an American hospital. In it we found several nurses, among whom are Misses Anna Amato, Lillian Jaffe, and Fannie Brill. They directed us to the American Rubber Company, where we found Mr. John Scholl, the President. There were several stenographers working for him, among them Misses Ruby Simpson, Emma Cahoon, Mildred Pittman, and Mary Sykes.

We asked the President where we might get service guides and assistance in preparing for our wild animal hunt. He directed us to the firm of Wood, Wood, and Wood. They fitted us out with guides and equipment. We will leave tomorrow.

Your friend,

EDDY.

BOMBAY, INDIA,
June 18, 1944.

DEAR JOE,

We had a successful animal hunt. With those which I have bought from other people, I can have a fairly good circus for performances in London before we get the full show in New York.

While on our expedition we met a band of lion-hunters who are working for the Smithsonian Institute. This party, headed by Alex Segal, was composed of Morris Leiderman, Harry Leiderman, Samuel Leiderman, and several Maury girls, the Misses Marie Console, Margaret Lubschutz, Josephine Margiotta, and Reba Rodisky. They are working for the famous animal huntress, Miss Virginia Yansen. We also met a party of authors who are getting material for stories. The most interesting of these were Stoddard Rockwell and Willard Owens, and Misses Nellie Doran, Catharine Bard, Lota Spence, and Rose Rosenberg. The last Mauryites we met were members of a moving picture producing company. This band was headed by their manager, Miss Thelma Powell, and her assistant, Miss Helen Denson. Several photographers were with them, but we knew only John Lang and James Lawson and Misses Mattie Belvin, Elsie Burgess, and Margaret Kelbaugh.

We have sent the show to London, but we intend to tour a bit.

We shall leave here on the ship "Miss Cubberly," which is named for the highest paid woman in the offices of the E. and J. Beck Shipping Corporation.

We will leave shortly. I will write again when we make a stop.

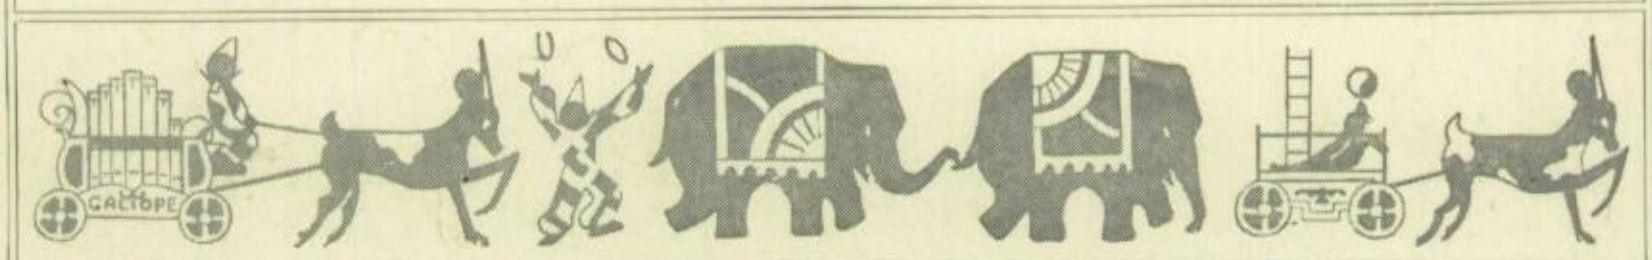
Your friend,

EDDY.

CAIRO, EGYPT,
July 1, 1944.

DEAR JOE,

I surely was glad to get your last letter. I didn't know that George Burton is the President of the Hambury, Gibbs, and Jones Company. I was surely surprised to learn that Miss Credle has been appointed to fill the vacancy in President Warren's Cabinet. He was lucky to have the age law changed, otherwise he wouldn't be in office now. I expected to find Misses Vera Abbitt, Margaret Coffield, and Sue Bailey as her assistants. I suppose her Secretary, Miss Jakeman, has an office, too. We were all surprised to learn that Professor Macon had become President of Princeton University. I suppose that Miss Miller is still Dean at Vassar. Are Misses Mason, Martin, Tatum, and Bondurant still associated with her? I had already heard of Miss Margaret White's position at Wellesley.



We have done considerable traveling about Egypt in the past few days. I suppose you haven't heard that Captain Eames of the French Foreign Legion, is stationed here. We met the new manager of the Consular office here today. He is our fellow-student, Mr. Henry C. Freeman Cook. Misses Ayers, Conway, and Cohen are stenographers in his office. There is a new American organization here to aid travelers. Miss Wynona Dodge is President of this company and Miss Annie McCoy is her assistant. There are a great many travelers in Cairo at the present time. We have met Misses Dunford, Foard, and Moore, the representatives of the English Jewelry Company. They are going home for a rest.

I guess I will close now, but I will write you from Madrid. I shall be back home by the middle of August. I will then be able to start a tour through the North American Continent with the biggest circus ever organized.

Your friend,

EDDY.

MADRID, SPAIN,
July 10, 1944.

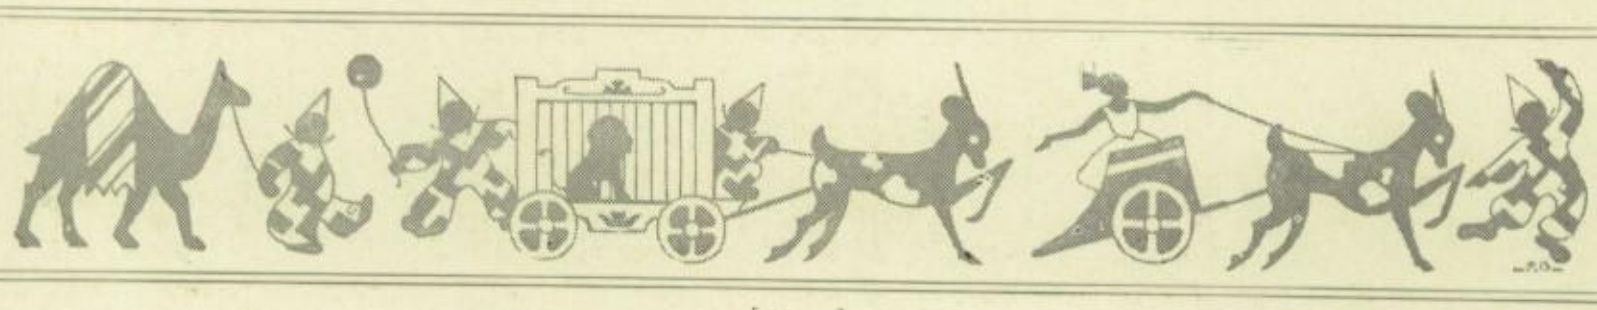
DEAR JOE,

We will make a short tour of certain parts of Europe before I go to London. We have been in Spain for a few days now.

On the ship from Egypt we met Lady Chester, nee Are Dee Godwin, who is the second Virginia woman to enter the British Parliament. We crossed with one of Miss Hamlet's touring parties. Miss Lois Parkerson was with her as aide-de-camp. We saw Ben only once while on the trip. There were several representative Egyptologists in the party, among them Misses Krouse, Prause, and Smith. We also met Misses Debnam, Whitney, and Young, who have been recuperating from their labors as guides in the Treasury Building in Washington.

While we were traveling through Southern Spain we saw a school in which Americans learn to revile each other in hot and florid Castilian. Miss Brownstein is the principal of this educational institution, and the Misses Cromwell, Cross, Romm, and West teach in it.

Coming northward on a Spanish train, we learned that the rich American, Frank Golden (Silver), had at last gotten control of the railroad on which we were traveling, as the government had tired of it. The first woman to be Vice-President of a railroad is Miss Restonica Jones. Other officers of this line are Robert Armocaust, who is Secretary, and Carl Cramme, Treasurer.



A recent revolution almost succeeded here, but the government overcame the rebels with the assistance of the great General, Byron Belote, American soldier of fortune. His right-hand man was Brigadier-General Wilson Chandler.

Nothing further of interest has happened, so I will close for the present.

Your friend,

EDDY.

LUCERNE, SWITZERLAND,
July 15, 1944.

DEAR JOE,

We toured Italy for a few days. As we were examining Mt. Vesuvius, we saw the famous "Peppy News" photographer, Mr. Fred Stewart. He is taking pictures for his syndicate, which is now headed by N. W. Williams. By the way, Joe, the pruning of pictures (mild form of censoring) is done by the manager of this department, Mr. Constant, and the developing is handled by Miss Nathalie Cason.

We also met a band of ancient history students led by Miss Katherine Dyer. She is connected with the Research Bureau conducted by Misses Hedgepeth, Fulcher, and Ayers. Much of the studying is done under Professors Rea and White, of this organization.

We have crossed the Alps coming here, as did Hannibal, and we did not have nearly so much trouble. We came over the railroad planned by Mr. Stanton Meads and built by the Holladay, Jacobson, and Legum Construction Company.

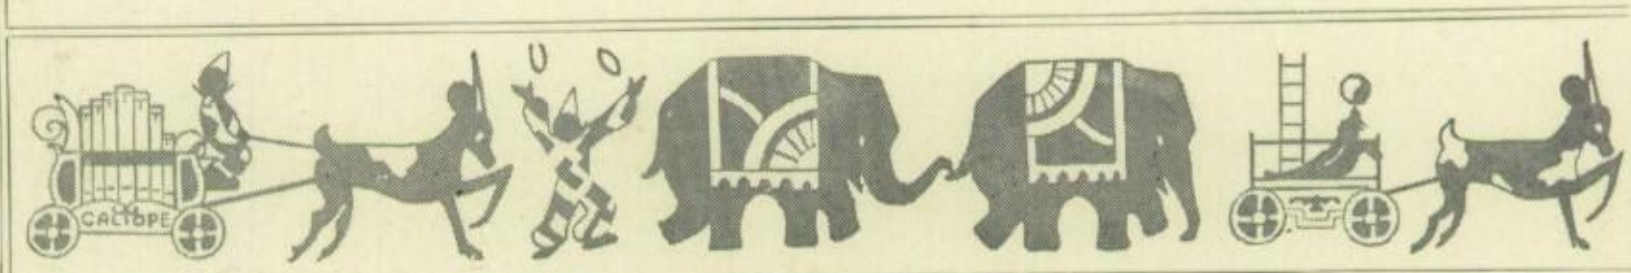
There is a Peace Conference meeting here at the present time. Secretary of State Tonelson is represented by his assistant, William Everett, three Senators—John Morgan, Clinton Paul and Miss Lois Cox, and three representatives at large, all women—Misses Askew, Baldwin, and Sawyer.

The winter sports of the Olympic Games were held here last winter. "Red" Penn won the dash for men, and Miss Jacquelin Spencer the race for women.

I will close now.

Your friend,

EDDY.

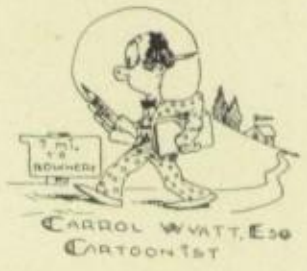


BERLIN, GERMANY,
July 20, 1944.

DEAR JOE,

We arrived in this city yesterday. It's a strange place. All the writing is in German.

As we were visiting yesterday we saw the American Banking Company, operated by the Fenner-Perry Company. Miss Margaret Baylor is Secretary for the firm. She told us that her friends, Misses Gloria Darden and Gazelle Brady, are now running a millinery shop.



We met Misses Frances Holland and Ellen Dunston and Messrs. Tada and Smith, who are touring Europe to secure scenery for several theaters. They told us that Harry Fruit is a commercial advertiser. By the way, there we met Carrol Wyatt, William Redd, and Jack Taylor, the cartoonists.

We visited the dirigible factory here this morning. The chief mechanic is an American, Wainwright Willing. Among the designers are Virginius Williams and Ernest Young.

Today we saw the great bottling works here. John Ferris is Superintendent of the plant. Some other officials in it are Fairbanks Field and Luther Dawley. It has been necessary to import American business men to run the near-beer places in this country since Germany endorsed the Eighteenth Amendment.

I had a letter from Howard Chapman the other day. He is living in Canada now. He, Sidney Hughes, William Kinsey, and Bernard Lubschutz are importers there.

I must close now, but I shall write you again.

Your friend,
EDDY.

P. S.—I am parting with Ben and Johnny tonight. I am going to England, while they tour Europe for several weeks.

PARIS, FRANCE,
July 25, 1944.

DEAR JOE,

I feel rather lonesome without my dentist and my surgeon. However, I am meeting old friends. Miss Mary Jones is hostess in a large hotel here. I learned from her that Misses Beatrice Downey and Rosemary Dugan are married and living in Richmond, Virginia. That sounds a long way off.

This city is full of tourists from America. I have met Mrs. Van Astorbilt, formerly Miss Gretchen Carter. Her husband is the great oil man. I also saw Mr. Louis Mand, the packing company magnate, who is traveling for his health. Messrs. Mendelson and Rudel, foreign salesmen for the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company, are in the city. I learned from them that Mr. Maxwell Petock is now President of this company. I enjoy the sights here. In the Eiffel tower yesterday I met Misses Richardson and Parker, who are Secretaries for the wives of American business men. They mentioned that Misses Virginia Evans and Violet Miller are staying at their hotel while studying pictures in the Louvre. They intend to be art critics.

At my hotel I met Miss Melba Shafer, who is "doing" Europe for pleasure. She said that her friends, Misses Elizabeth Burns, Georgia Zehner, and Elizabeth Robbins, are living in the West now. She also stated that Mr. Keith Oliver is a ranchman in Texas and that Messrs. Thompson and Twohy are lawyers for a great Trust Company in Chicago.

I must close now. I will write a letter from London on the success of the show at that place.

Your friend,

EDDY.

LONDON, ENGLAND,
August 6, 1944.

DEAR JOE,

I will leave here tonight for home. My circus, although in an embryonic state, was well received by the public. This was due to an excellent write-up given it by Homer Young, of the "London Mail." Through this account a number of old Maury students heard that I had the show, and came out to see it. I will tell you something about those that I met.

Miss Pearl Aronov is now directing a tourist party as a relaxation from her work as government interpreter. From her I learned that the former Sara Kirby is now the wife of the Florida orange king. She is probably "sun-kist" by now. I also saw Miss Vesey, who is lecturing on the physical benefits derived from golf. Miss Virginia Land is traveling in Europe as a rest from her studies of the action of a human brain.

I guess I will close now, but I will be able to see you for a few days before I start to tour America with a full-sized circus. Its name will probably be "Sing Sing Brothers Barring Failure."

Your friend,

EDDY.

ALBANY, NEW YORK,
September 1, 1944.

DEAR JOE,

I was sorry to miss seeing you in New York, but practically everything was ready for the circus to leave when I arrived with the animals. We arrived here yesterday. I have met several old friends who are to be with us. Misses Camille Lafrage, Rita Engel, Virginia Dare Holland, and Helen Jacobs are aerial trapeze artists who are wonders in their line. Robert Turpin is the business manager for the show.

MISS PHILLIPS STUDIES THE GERMS

I have seen some of the city. I met Miss Evelyn Phillips, a nurse, who does nothing but study different kinds of germs. Personally, I don't see why anyone should be interested in a germ's welfare, but that doesn't matter. She told me that last spring Miss Dorothy Tucker, who owns a chicken farm in Illinois, came through this city. By the way, Joe, she heard from the latter that Miss Margaret Wetzel is a welfare worker in Chicago now. I also learned from Miss Phillips that our classmate, Miss Nettie White, is now married to a gold miner in Colorado.

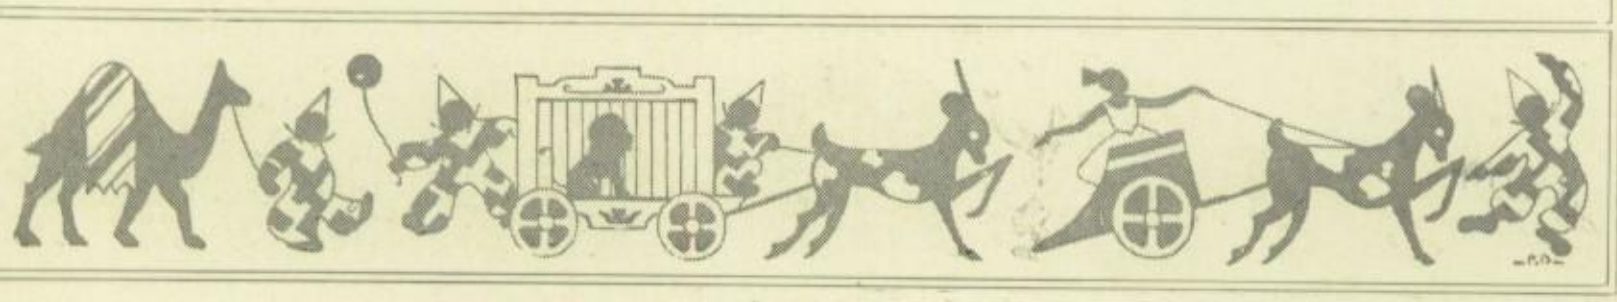
I have met Miss Minnie Loren while here. She is a government employee. She stated that Misses Margaret Hussey, Adair Wright, and Alice Gaskins, also, are in the State offices. She met Miss Mamie Gilliam, the Florida advertiser, recently. From her she learned that Misses Anna Folston, Sue Dietrick, and Doris Edwards are now State executives of the Girl Scouts there. By the way, Joe, you probably have not heard that Miss Mary Pierce is National Girl Scout Executive now.

The last Mauryite whom I have met in this city is Miss Olga Paul, who is a Salvation Army worker. She has Misses Virginia Randolph and Virginia Tynes working under her. They believe, like the referee in the famous 1926 Tunney-Dempsey fight, that, though a man may be down, he is never out.

I have no more news, so I will close.

Your friend,

EDDY.



CHICAGO, ILLINOIS,
September 10, 1944.

DEAR JOE,

We are stopping at a few large cities and staying quite a while, as it is almost time for winter quarters. We arrived in this metropolis two days ago. I have met lots of old friends here. By the way, Joe, we have just hired a new ringmaster. He is our old friend, G. Isaacs. I will now tell you something about our other friends.

EDDY IN CHICAGO

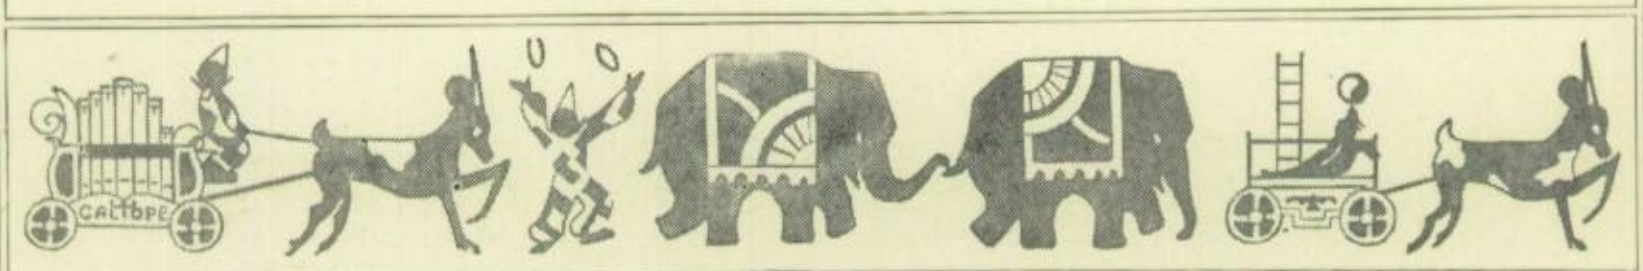
Miss Enrigetta Bosio is librarian of the great library here. She says that Miss Evelyn Hutchinson, who previously held the position, now holds a similar one in the Congressional Library in Washington. Her classmates, Misses Massengil and Sutton, she relates, are working here with a great insurance company. We talked about some of our other old friends and I found out that Misses Bessie Cox, Mildred Craft, and Ruth Legum are now in the extension work of the University of Chicago. They teach home economics. That doesn't deal with how to keep the dollar, or I would take it. Guess I'm Scotch after all. I also found that our friends, Misses Hardy, Corinne Johnson, and Lucy Inge, are now in Canada with their husbands, British army officers. Wonder if they are officers at home? They are probably high privates of the rear rank. I was surprised to find out that Misses Margaret Marshall and Nellie Chandler were living in California and operating a great vineyard there.

By the way, Joe, Bill Valentine is an astronomer at the Mt. Wilson Observatory.

I have also met Miss Marx, who is on the staff of the "Chicago Tribune." She writes features for this great paper. I read a feature by her on the life of Miss Dorothy Norton, the poet, so I went to visit her to see if she had any information about the graduates of Maury in '29. Well, you can draw your own conclusions. She showed me clippings about Miss Mary Edmonds, the great author; Mr. Frank Wilson, the famous geologist (he's a student of the earth's crust. Everything has a crust, you know, human beings included); Miss K. Krouse, the expert vegetable grower; and Misses Erma Page and Leavell Monfalcone, society women.

I guess I have told you enough for once, so I will close.

Your friend,
EDDY.



St. Louis, Missouri,
September 18, 1944.

Dear Joe,

We have had a fine trip thus far. Everything seems to be going along in good shape. I have plenty of time to look up old friends. You know I have a mania for that anyhow. I will write you about some of our mutual acquaintances.

"Miss Seay, The Famous Doctor"

Misses Mattie Belvin, Elizabeth Davidson, and Emma Ewell are busines women in this fair city.

I learned from the former that Misses Richardson, Sommers and Giddens, are connected with a great dry goods chain which operates a store in this city. Well, it looks as if the whole country is "drying up." The recent Miss Leiderman is now the wife of the head of this chain.

September 19, 1944.

I'm sorry I had to cut this letter in half, Joe, but I had to leave. I went out to the show last night and ran across Miss Marjorie Smith, a teacher here; Miss B. E. Cannon, a great author, who is hunting for material for a circus novel; Miss Ritch, who has gotten rich on her real estate; Miss Mary Seay, the famous physician, and Miss Alpha Owens, who is a naturalist. I found out why so many celebrities were present. Miss Anna Garrett, a local newspaper writer, gave us an excellent "write-up."

I learned from Miss Patrick, the aviatrix, whom I met today, that Misses Ferebee, Winifred Heffley, and June Jones are living in nearby towns.

I met Judge Sivills, the second great Juvenile Court justice, who told me that his work had been cut almost in half since Miss Margaret McKevitt started writing about home relations. He also said that if we had more good laws like that one introduced by Senator Miss Doris Nichols and passed by the House through the work of Representative Augustus Tuttle and Senator Mildred Simons, he saw no reason why the reform school would not be abolished soon.

Well, Joe, I guess I will close, but I will write again soon.

Your friend,
Eddy.

Kansas City, Missouri,
September 27, 1944.

Dear Joe,

We arrived in this city some time ago. I have met a great many people here with whom I went to school. Misses Morrell, Parsons, and Smith are connected with a great packing company here. Yesterday I ran across Theodore Wilkerson, who is a stock raiser in this State. I learned that Miss Ruth McCraw is now at Hot Springs, Missouri, studying the effects of spring water on the human body.

I met Misses Inez Patterson and Martha Shipman, who are connected with the city's Beautifying Commission, at a dinner in honor of Mr. Bowden, who is city engineer here. Miss F. Wagner, an executive of the Y. W. C. A., made a very interesting speech on the city's advance in recent years. On this occasion I also met Miss Carolyn Buchanan, the great interior decorator, and the former Miss Bennett, now wife of the great millionaire stock broker.

Well, Joe, I guess I will close until some future date.

Your friend,

EDDY.

P. S.—I have just received a letter from Ben. He says that Miss Ruth White, a famous globe-trotter, has just joined Miss Hamlet's party in Europe. It seems funny that he should have learned it, but you know Lois is in that party.

EDDY.

MEMPHIS, TENNESSEE,
October 5, 1944.

DEAR JOE,

I had another letter from Ben today. He surely seems to be meeting people. He has met our friends, Misses Lucille White, Beatrice West, and Julia Ward, who are connected with a Finance Bureau because of past experience in spending their husbands' money. They made money doing it, though.

Well, I will now tell you about the show. It has gained an addition. Miss Whitehead, an expert with horses, has recently joined us. It is wonderful to see the animals act, but it is dangerous at times.

"MISS LEVINE IS IN THE CANDY BUSINESS"

Many ex-Maury students have come to this city, which the record books say is nearly four times as bad as Chicago. Miss Florence Siebert is in charge of the city auditorium. She brings whatever she likes in the way of recreation or education to this city. Miss Elizabeth Waldman, the great singer, has been here recently, and I hear that Miss Alma Smith, Chautauqua lecturer, is to visit here soon. Our Misses Frances Ward and Janie Mizzell live on cotton plantations near here. No more silk dresses for them. It pays to advertise. I had never heard it before, but I found Miss Levine is in the candy business in this city. She runs a great mail order business. Miss Frances Wagner is a Secretary for Sears, Roebuck, and Company. It looks as if Maury is still "swinging along" in business.

Your friend,

EDDY.

MACON, GEORGIA,
October 15, 1944.

DEAR JOE,

We have arrived here for the winter. The animals are being put into new quarters for the season. Everything seems to be in good shape. It looks, however, as if I will not be a circus owner next spring. Mr. James Wright, my greatest competitor, has made me, through his representatives, Misses Lucas and Shipman, a business offer too tempting to resist. I have decided that my best interest lies in accepting. So I am singing my gentle swan song to the circus business. I have made some money out of it, and it has given me great fun.

I am meeting some Mauryites here. Miss Elizabeth Thomas, the New York society woman, passed through here on her trip south to play golf. Mrs. Carnemellon (Miss Mary Trimyer) was with her.

By the way, Joe, I have just met Miss Annie Trachtenburg, the President of the Trachtenburg, Trachtenburg, and Lancaster Company, owners of a ready-to-wear shop. I also met Miss Sparrow, the Secretary of a New York law firm, who has heard that you are to be married soon. Who is the lucky (?) girl?

Your interested friend,

EDDY.

P. S.—I'll see you at the reunion at the Maury-Wilson game next Thanksgiving.

Burnt Trees

They thrust their gnarled limbs against the sky;
Charred, black, they writhe in grotesque supplication—
Outlined like rivulets of India-ink
Upon the gray-white, starless sheet of sky.

Impressed beyond mere earthly words I watch
This sombre symphony in black and white.
The naked trees that suffer without cry,
While, mute, they raise their arms in humble prayer.

Star Dust

A star fell down my chimney and
I watched it as it fell,
And watching it I wondered just
What tales it had to tell;
What legends of fair distant lands
It could to me impart.
I heard a step—I grabbed the star
And put it in my heart!

Someday when I'm all alone and
Longing for a smile,
I'll take the star out of my heart
And play with it a while.
I'll hold it in my hand. I'll let it
Fall to hear it ring,
Or I'll put it in a gilded cage
And listen to it sing.

Perhaps I'll plant my star and
Raise a crop of tiny dreams;
But still, I'd hate to bury it, because
To me it seems
A shame to dull the brightness of
The star with bits of sod.
I guess I'll have to buy some wings
And send it back to God.

JUNIOR CLASS

Junior Class History

Down Life's pathway we tread, hardly noticing its ruggedness until we have reached a milestone, and looking back recall the many pleasant memories and unpleasant obstacles that have come to us thus far; and so it is that we gather together these milestones and call them history.

Our milestones are few to casual observers, but to us, who know the incidents, the friends, and the places around which they center, they are marking-places of achievement!

Our first milestone was at the point of our migration into Maury as Sophomores, one thousand strong. Our migration was the only thing marked upon that milestone, except the names of Miss Faye Savage, Sponsor; James Coates, President; Louis Carner, Vice-President; Virginia Hosier, Secretary; Murray Harrison, Treasurer.

That mark was broken by a change in the list as February brought us the following officers: Louis Carner, President; Frances Rawlings, Vice-President; Mary Willis, Secretary; Beatrice Wynn, Treasurer.

When we came in the fall, six hundred eighty in number, as Juniors, we set up our second milestone. We selected as officers the following: Miss Faye Savage, Sponsor; Louis Carner, President; Beatrice Wynne, Vice-President; Mary Willis, Secretary; Albert Keller, Treasurer.

Within the class there has grown a spirit of friendship and co-operation. We are looking forward to the production of our class play in the spring, which will be the occasion for the placing of another landmark, to commemorate the close of a successful year.

MARY WILLIS, Secretary.

Sophomore Class History

IT was in February, 1928, that a small number from the classes of the Junior High Schools found their way to Maury High School. They entered as 9A's, while the remainder of the class stayed at Blair and Ruffner. These few found the days hard, for there is a great difference in being a Senior at Junior High School and being a "Rat" at Maury! However, in September of the same year, the remainder of the pupils came from other schools, and helped to form the largest Sophomore Class in Maury's history. The first few days were difficult for the new ones, but comparatively easy for the "experienced." Friends were separated and put in classes with strange people. Who can forget those early days?

The first business of importance was the election of officers of the Sophomore Class. A nominating committee was formed from pupils elected from each home room. A week later the following officers were elected:

Gordon Keith	President
Edward Lee Myers	Vice-President
Helen Grinnan	Secretary
Reginald Page	Treasurer
Mary Hood	Representative to the "Maury News"
Nell Burruss	Representative to "The Commodore"
Miss Gillette	Sponsor

Several of our number went out for football, while others joined the various clubs.

After the Christmas holidays, examinations came upon us. What days and nights of "cramming" preceded these "terrors!" The day of reckoning came after examination, but most of the Sophomores were promoted.

A new term began with the usual change of schedules and teachers. A change in officers was also made, and Edward Nussey was elected Vice-President. We were glad to welcome some new Sophomores who had come up from the 9A Class. However, our manner was a bit condescending to these newcomers, for, after all, we were "high Sophs" in every sense of the word.

Members of our class settled down in a few weeks with a new vigor, for we realized that our fondest hopes would be fulfilled next year, when as full-fledged Juniors, we would be a step nearer the goal—and glory!

The Circus Parade

THE news spread like wildfire through the Italian quarter. The circus parade, which had been so looked forward to by all, was at last coming. It was to pass through the foreign section that very afternoon. Now the annual circus parade means as much as the circus itself to the poor Italians who cannot see the performance; they turn out, one and all. It is a gala event which excites the interest of everyone in the family, from the old, grey-haired "granny" to the smallest, wide-eyed "Bambino."

The Sagonas had heard the news, and all was excitement in the dingy rooms of the tenement they called home. It was a day of show-off, and the musty old chest in the corner was opened. Brightly colored shawls, now frayed and worn with age and usage, and fancy, frilled waistcoats for the men (remnants from the "old country") were taken out and put on with great ceremony. Work was laid aside, troubles forgotten, for the circus parade was coming.

However, there was one thing that marred their anticipation. Little Angelo, who lay sick, was no better. Medicine did not seem to help him, and for days he had tossed about restlessly in the poorly lighted room. The doctor had told them that little Angelo was wasting away, and that if something did not soon break the apathy of hopelessness into which he had sunk, they must despair of his life.

This day he was more quiet and despondent than ever, for after having counted so much on seeing the circus parade, his mother had decided that he would only be worse were he to venture out. However, Angelo was not the only one disappointed. Bartomello, his brother, was also deprived of going, for he was to stay with Angelo. Bartomello was not selfish, but it was unbelievable to him that, after all these days of waiting, he would miss the circus parade.

Mrs. Sagona hummed softly as she fastened a brilliant scarf around her head. Then she stopped! Her breath quickened, for in the distance she heard the low, warning note of the fire siren.

"Sacre, Blessed Mary—protect!" she murmured in prayer, as the sound died.

At times she feared for the consequences when the Rafello children below played with matches after their parents left. Someday, maybe—

"Rosie, Rosie! Come, we are ready."

"Please to go weeth you, madra, please to go," Bartomello frantically pleaded.

"No, no, Bartomello. You are to stay weeth your brother."

Little Angelo, his slight figure straining forward, was sad. "You no changa da mind?" he asked. "Maybe I get better if I go."

Then all was still in the tenement. For a moment they sat there, Angelo and Bartomello, brothers in misery, and the tears streamed down their faces. They could hear from below the shouts of their friends running down the street toward the sound of faint, oncoming music. The sobbing from the bed stopped, and Little Angelo said in a voice he tried to make brave, "Bartomello, you go see da big parade; thenna you come tella Angelo abouta eet."

The other one sighed and said, "No, Leetle Angelo, I weel staya heer weeth you. You are seek; don'ta feel well."

"Oh, to go, to go!" Angelo cried miserably.

Then and there Bartomello made a decision.

He smiled happily.

"I will taka you, my brother. But how? How?"

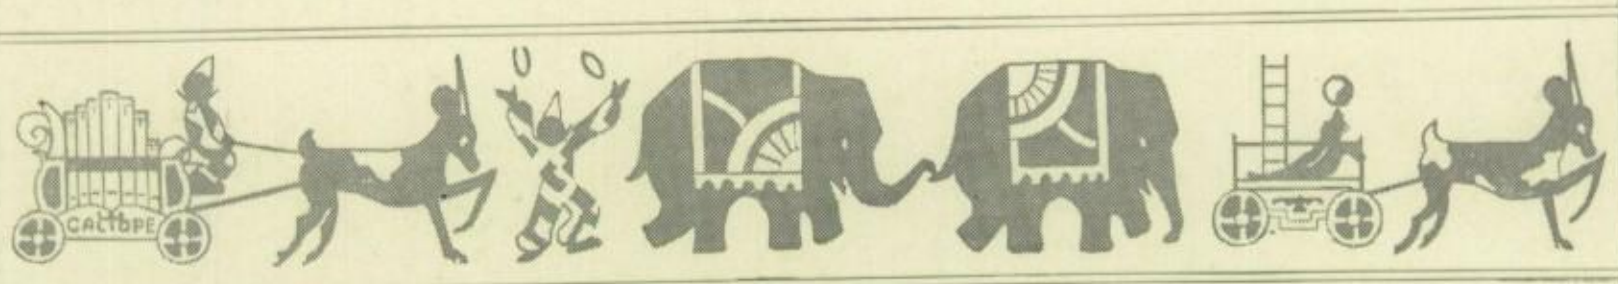
He was thoughtful for a moment.

"Why, in father Giotto's pushcart, of course. You shall be the fairest of my fruit, Angelo." Bartomello laughed merrily.

The faded light in the small boy's eyes began to glimmer and glow brightly. Well might it, for he was going to the circus parade! Bartomello lifted him gently from the bed and quickly dressed him in a motley assortment of clothes. Down the creaky steps he carried the light burden and put Angelo in his father's cart. The little boy, swathed in so many clothes like a mummy, and seated on top of the old pushcart, was a curious and pathetic sight. The dark, wan face, protruding from a halo of light-colored shawls was now transfixed by a saintly expression. A flush was creeping on his cheeks, dancing in expectancy. Sturdy Bartomello rolled the cart down the street toward the gathering throng. He forced the cumbersome pushcart to the front, so that Little Angelo would have an unrestricted view of all that was to happen.

The shrill, piercing notes of the steam calliope piped that the circus parade had at last started. First came the huge elephants, moving grey masses with swinging trunks. Dark-skinned trainers, wearing red turbans and purple robes, rode in the howdahs and were not unlike rich Hindu sultans. The dull, measured beat of tom-toms and weird Oriental music helped to create a barbaric atmosphere. Next came the cages of tawny lions, roaring defiantly and slashing the cages with their tufted tails. Following them were the snarling tigers, lithe, powerful beasts, pacing nervously. After a long procession of animals, the bareback riders passed on their high-stepping, milky-white steeds with scarlet plumes. They were followed by a great variety of other horsemen, Indians, and cowboys.

Then came the clowns! A few formed a band furnished with old, dented musical instruments from which unearthly sounds were emitted. The wheezing of the slide trombones, the deep rumble of a bent-up brass horn played by a fat, perspiring clown who tried to outblow the others, and the antiquated drum filled the street with unholy din; it fell as music from heaven on the ears of Bartomello and little Angelo. When a greased pig was chased over the cobblestones and all the efforts to capture it, made by the acrobatic clowns, proved utterly futile, Angelo almost split his sides with laughter. He was having the best time in his young life, for this was his first circus parade.



His eyes grew as big as saucers when a fat clown—a roly-poly clown with red stripes on his face—came over to the pushcart. The jolly performer started to jig, and his fat body tossed grotesquely around like a jelly fish. He finished in a grand flurry and bowed low before the stupefied boy. Then he extended his plump hand to Angelo. From out of the maze of shawls came another hand, a slender, thin one. It was immediately enveloped by a larger one, and the crowd roared its approval as the funny old clown and the wide-eyed lad shook hands. Into the hand of Angelo a large, rosy apple was pressed, and away whirled the clown in a series of cartwheels.

Then from out of nowhere, it seemed, there rose a discordant note to mar the enjoyment. It was a deadly, reckless tone—a taunting cry like a devil's laugh. It rose higher and higher, and then screeched the word out to the world, "Fire!! Fire!" And men and women felt the dread creep into their hearts. Joy was turned to anxiety, as mothers thought of their happy, innocent babies at home.

To the boy's mother, a block away, came the fearful sound. Suppose it was her house—and her boys were there, alone, and surprised by the fire, which might so suddenly cut off any escape—trap them in a wall of seething flame. Like a trip-hammer the remorseful question pounded into her dazed brain. Why hadn't she let them come; why hadn't she, oh, why?

The circus parade was forgotten as the crowd struggled and fought down the street to the fire. Bartomello and little Angelo were among the last to leave, so they brought up the rear. Swirling clouds of smoke veiled the neighborhood in black. Bartomello gasped with the realization that his house was on fire. A group of frenzied women were imploring the firemen to attempt another rescue party into the roaring inferno, but it was death to venture into the building.

Bartomello could see his own mother and family wringing their hands in despair, for they thought that Bartomello and Angelo had surely perished. He was hemmed in by the people, and he could not break through. All his cries to attract her attention were in vain. Then he remembered the odd little whistle known only to his mother and to him. If anything would attract her attention, this would. With quivering lips he whistled. She had not heard! Again he whistled. Above all the clamor and hullabaloo, the odd little tune found its way to her ears. Her boys lived! A moment of frantic fighting through the mob united them. Joy flooded the heart of the mother, for she knew the Blessed Mary had answered her prayer.

The Sagonas rejoiced loudly and openly. As for little Angelo, he was alive with energy, for the excitement of the day had served as a mighty stimulus to him.

The circus parade had gone, but in its wake it had left happiness and health.

Sewall Raeburn Logan, '31.

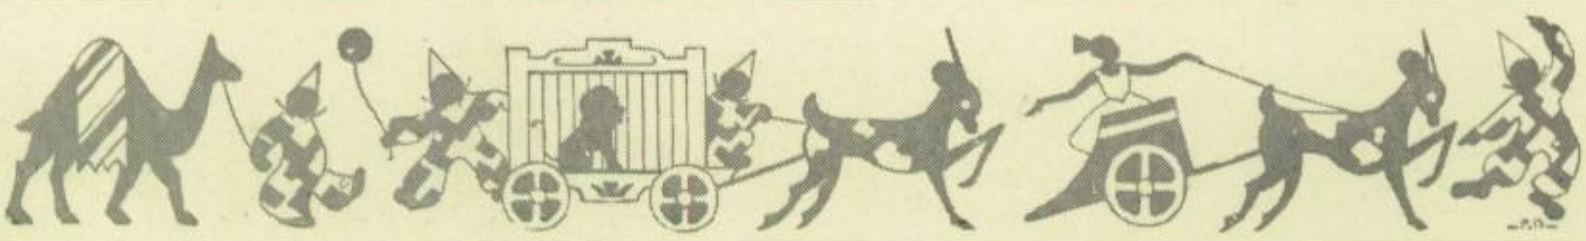
The Clubs of Maury

CHIEF among the extra-curricular activities that Maury offers to her pupils are the clubs. Through these clubs the theoretical knowledge gained in the class room is strengthened by further reading, observation, discussion and practice. Here interest is created in a way which will prove beneficial to the individual after his school days are passed, and he is making his place in the world. As an example, the nationally known lawyer of tomorrow may have had his earliest training as a member of a Maury debating society. So also, the future prima donna may find herself indebted to the Maury Choral Club, whose leader first discovered the possibilities of her voice.

The subject societies occupy one of the important places in the field of club work. This type of organization includes the Girls' English, Latin, French and Spanish Societies and the Business and Science Clubs. The members of the Girls' English Society have been well repaid for their earnest efforts to present worthwhile programs through which new ideas on the great masterpieces of literature have been gained. The State Reading Contest is now sponsored by this society.

The Latin Club has lived up to its purpose, that of stimulating interest in the study of the language and promoting a knowledge of the old Romans and their private life.

The French Society has aimed to encourage the enthusiasm of its members for France through a study of her literature, her language, and her customs. This society offers annually a scholarship to the member having made the greatest progress in the study of French.



Each monthly meeting of the Spanish Society, conducted entirely in Spanish, has featured unusual programs. To encourage the reading of Spanish literature, the club awarded a prize to the member who read the greatest number of Spanish works, exclusive of the ones studied in class. Maury pennants were sold and the money gained by the sale was used to give a Spanish scholarship to a deserving pupil.

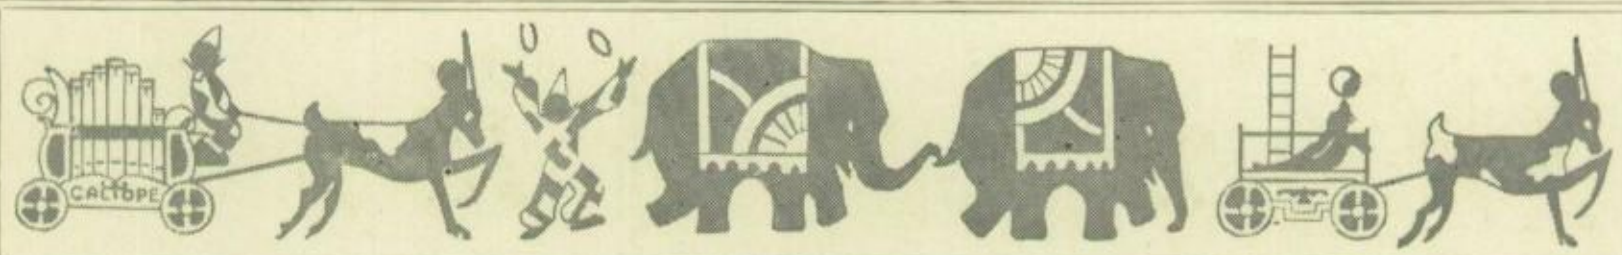
The Maury Business Club exists for the benefit of the students in the Commercial Department in order that they may be better fitted to enter the business world. It is a progressive organization which means more to the commercial student than any other factor, outside of the classroom, that touches his life in Maury.

Trips to the leading industries of Norfolk have proved to be the most interesting and popular feature of the Science Club's year. A show case, used to hold exhibits of a scientific nature, was a valuable contribution made by the club to the Science Department.

The work of the Maury and Bain Debating Societies is also closely allied to, and partly dependent on, the work done in the classroom. Through hard research and incessant practice both societies have prepared excellent debating and public speaking teams, which show great promise of being successful at the Charlottesville finals in the Spring. The Book Shop, a valuable asset to the school, is under the supervision of the Maury Debating Society.

The Hi-Y Club and the High School Student Club are the service clubs of Maury. The Hi-Y is a member of the Y. M. C. A. Its purpose is to create, extend, and maintain the high standards of Christian character throughout the high school and community. All Maury's contests have been heartily backed by this club. Maury is indebted to the Hi-Y for many services, among them the distribution of the Christmas baskets to the poor. The High School Student Club is an allied organization of the Y. W. C. A. This is one of Maury's largest clubs, and its activities have been many. Aside from contributions to the poor at Christmas, this club helped with the work in the Junior High School Club. The Father-Daughter Banquet in March and the Mother-Daughter Banquet in May were attractive features of the yearly programs. The Commodore Excursion, sponsored by the Student Club, was also a great success.

The Dramatic Club is another of Maury's organizations. During the Community Drive Fund Week the club gave a very effective display, demonstrating the work of the American Red Cross, for which it was awarded second prize. The Dramatic Club production of "The Rivals," by Sheridan, was artistically given, and was most favorably received.



Chief among the activities of the Choral Club was the presentation of the brilliant and colorful "Iolanthe," a Gilbert and Sullivan operetta, which was one of the most spectacular performances of the year.

The Girls' Tennis Club offers to the girls of Maury an opportunity to improve their game through conscientious practice and expert advice.

The Golf Club is Maury's newest organization, but it is none the less progressive. Under skilled instruction the members of the team have practiced faithfully, so that the coveted trophies to be given in the tournament may find their way to Maury's halls.

The Cheerio Club, with a membership of over two hundred, grew from the desire of the girls to express their interest in the athletic contests of Maury. Still in the first year of its existence, it has done much to promote school spirit and enthusiasm.

The Athletic Association and its co-working organizations, the Monogram Club and the Athletic Board, are established to promote and regulate interscholastic and intramural contests at Maury. These clubs of an athletic nature contribute materially to the extra-curricular life of the school.

The success of the clubs in Maury is due to the fact that they are varied enough to meet the needs and interest of every student. They represent happy hours spent in beneficial work, with care-free friends, amid pleasant surroundings.

Ray says he likes his new overcoat very much, 'cept he can't get used to the wood across his shoulders and the hook keeps knocking his hat off.

Sally: "So, my little man, you play football? How do you play, in the back-field?"
Jimmy: "Naw - out at League Park."

You ask why this eldtown on the part of one, Collie Willis? 'Tis easy to explain. She has just discovered what holds the moon up. Ask her and she'll say: "Moonbeams."

Stanley: "Hey, what's Billy Mac sitting there for with his mouth open?"
Dick: "Oh, he's Scotch and he's trying to get a free smoke."

Virginius: "Ah, fair señorita, tonight I will stand beneath your balcony and serenade you."
Elizabeth: "And I will throw you a rose."
Virginius: "In a moment of mad passion?"
Elizabeth: "No in a flower pot."

Catherine: "Do you use tooth paste?"
Lou: "Mercy, no - none of my teeth are loose."

Johnnie: "Oh, oh - I just bumped my crazy bone."
Rud: "Oh, never mind, Johnnie. Just comb your hair differently and the bump won't show."

Civitan Club Holds Oratorial Contest

Cash and Medals Offered To Participants On Topic Of Personal Politics

The subject of an oratorical contest to be sponsored by the Civitan Club of Norfolk among the pupils of high school grade in the public, private, and parochial schools is "Should Young Men and Women Take Their Politics from Their Parents?" The three pupils whose speeches are judged the best will receive, respectively, $30 in cash and a gold medal for first prize, $20 in cash and a silver medal for second prize, and $10 in cash and a bronze medal for third prize.

All speeches must be submitted in writing to the contest committee of the Civitan Club, 320 National Bank of Commerce Building, before April 25. On May 10 the judges will summon the writers of the ten best papers to deliver them in person. At this preliminary hearing, contestants will be rated 60 per cent on subject matter and 40 per cent on appearance and delivery. LIONS AND TIGERS PARADE IN CURRENT "COMMODORE"

Attractive Modernistic Drawings Depict Various Phases of School Life

The circus parade as the theme of the "Commodore" of this year, promises to make the book outstanding among the annuals published by Maury, on account of its originality and beauty of decoration. The underlying idea of the circus has provided a variety of subjects for the various drawings and plates.

As usual, the book is divided into sections showing the school activities. At the beginning of each section there is a drawing having some connection with the circus, and at the same time symbolizing the contents of that particular division. The faculty is represented as lion tamers, training three rings at once; each ring stands for one of the classes. The Seniors, constituting the oldest class, are depicted as elephants. Lions going through their tricks portray the Juniors, while the Sophomores, the youngest class, is shown as a troup of little performing dogs. Each club, too, is symbolized by an illustration of a circus scene, besides the regular photograph of the members and the write-up. The "Maury News," for example, is represented as the band-wagon that heralds the approach of the circus.

The art staff, headed by Polly Baldwin, is working with Mrs. Smith's classes in making the various circus drawings. As far as possible, the futuristic note is carried out. The drawing classes of Mr. Phillips are working on the mounting of photographs, the preparation of the panels, and similar tasks. Nearly all the societies have been photographed, as well as the members of the Hall of Fame.

The staff of the "Commodore," whose editorial head is Frances Stubbs, and whose business manager is Ben Costenbader, is now conducting a subscription campaign in the Junior and Sophomore classes. The print shop, directed by Mr. Thomas, has printed the attractive placards which have been decorated with pages of last year's annual. The advertising posters in the halls have been done by Carroll Wyatt, art editor of the Senior staff of the "Maury News."

"Maury News" Closes Successful Year

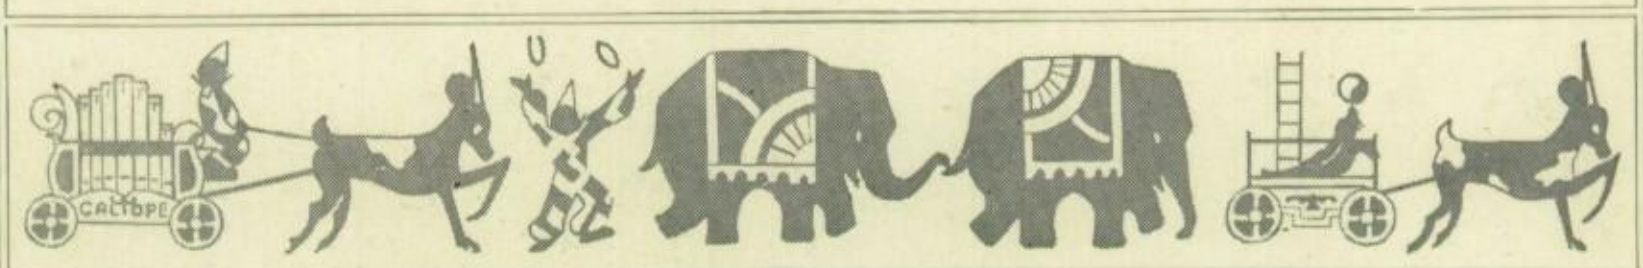
EFFICIENCY OF DUAL STAFF PROVED

"THE MAURY NEWS," completing its second year under the dual-staff system, closes a session of success and achievement. The Advertising Staff, under the able leadership of Meyer Barr, has placed the publication on a sound financial basis, while the Editorial Staff has put forth its best efforts to improve the quality of the material appearing in the paper. A spirit of keen but friendly rivalry between the Senior and Junior Staffs has stimulated every member of the journalism classes to do his utmost. Because of the success of the dual-staff plan during the two years of its existence at Maury, it is expected that the same policy will be continued next year.

The Senior Staff this session has been composed of the following members: Betty Oberndorfer, Lota Spence and Alfred Riggin, Associate Editors; Robert Goodman and Lindsay DeFrees, Sports; Margaret Arthur, Poetry; William Cooper, Personals; Anne Johnson, Clubs; Oliver Cook, Exchanges; Katherine Kane, Jokes; Alvin Tillette, Columnist; and Carroll Wyatt, Art Editor. The Junior Staff—Cary Baldwin, Florence DeFrees and Henry Roberts, Associate Editors; Richard Montague and George Walton, Sports; Lillian Banks, Poetry; Elizabeth Graves, Personals; Dorothy Ford, Clubs; Burke Drury, Exchanges; Paul Smith, Jokes; Horace Jeffress, Columnist; and Elsie Mercer, Art Editor. Irvin Shapiro, as Editor-in-Chief, has repeatedly proved his efficiency and capability. It is largely to his devotion to duty that the "Maury News" owes its success during 1928-1929.

One of the most signal accomplishments of the paper this year was the conducting of a prize contest with awards of $2.50 each for the best news article, editorial, feature, poem, short story, and solution of the mystery serial, "Arm and Hammer." The winners were the following students: Anne Johnson, Dorothy Ford, Lota Spence, William Jeffers, Meyer Barr, and Florence Benham. The prizes were presented in the auditorium by the Editor-in-Chief as part of a program presented by the journalism classes. "The Maury News" this year has begun the publication of letters from the readers, through which medium intelligent comment and constructive criticism have been offered, and topics of interest to the student body discussed.

With success marking the year's work and with indications of future achievement, "The Maury News" regards the future hopefully.



Benediction

THERE was an unusual glint of gold in the sun that morning. No one in the monastery seemed to sense the difference in the air, the throb of the pulse of earth and man, the feeling of new life and new love of life . . . no one felt these but the youngest monk.

He had paused often in his daily work to glance toward heaven and say to himself, "It is spring! It is spring!" The awful silence of the monastery oppressed him. He wanted to sing his joy—wanted to ring the great bells in the chapel and proclaim to the very world, "It is spring! It is spring!" But he dared not, because there was the old padre who would frown at him, his fellow-monks, who would shake their shaven heads and stare, and God, who would be disappointed in him.

Would God be disappointed in him if he sang his joy of spring and life? But he suppressed this question and was horrified at his own thoughts.

It was during the hour he loved the best, the hour before the sun is dimmed and the heavy bells are tolled for vespers. He was working in his garden, alone with his thoughts and his flowers, when the slight figure of a boy much younger than he dropped heavily from the top of the monastery wall and crouched at his feet. Between great sobs that shook his frail body, he begged for food.

The youngest monk was, by nature, very kind-hearted, but the thought of someone's intruding and being totally unaware that he was on hallowed ground shocked him. How he got there, the youngest monk did not question, but it was for him to get him out. Still, there was something in the boy's eyes he could not quite refuse. He tried to summon all his dignity as a monk, but it was useless. He forgot everything but the brown hunger in the eyes before him.

Hiding the boy in the house where the tools were kept, he hastened through the darkening garden. Into the vast, gray kitchen he crept, and in the huge sleeves of his frock he placed bread and cheese. Back through the gardens with the food he went, forgetting his own increasing hunger.

He fed the brown-eyed boy and sent him back into the noisy world.

Suddenly great bells started chiming, chiming. He looked up, but the monastery bells were still. Then he heard children singing, singing with birds—.

The youngest monk was afraid. What strange thing was this? Had he sinned in allowing the boy to remain on holy ground, and in giving his own evening meal to appease brown-eyed hunger? He dared not raise his eyes again, but, confused and hurt, he humbly bowed his head and asked God to forgive him his sin.

Instantly the bells were still and the singing died away and all was silent in the monastery garden.

Silently the monks kneeled in prayer, awaiting benediction. Across the face of the youngest monk there fell a light, pure and shining. Looking up, he saw a star slitting the evening haze with a thin brightness. A look of understanding came into his eyes. Peacefully he bowed his head and awaited benediction.

Football

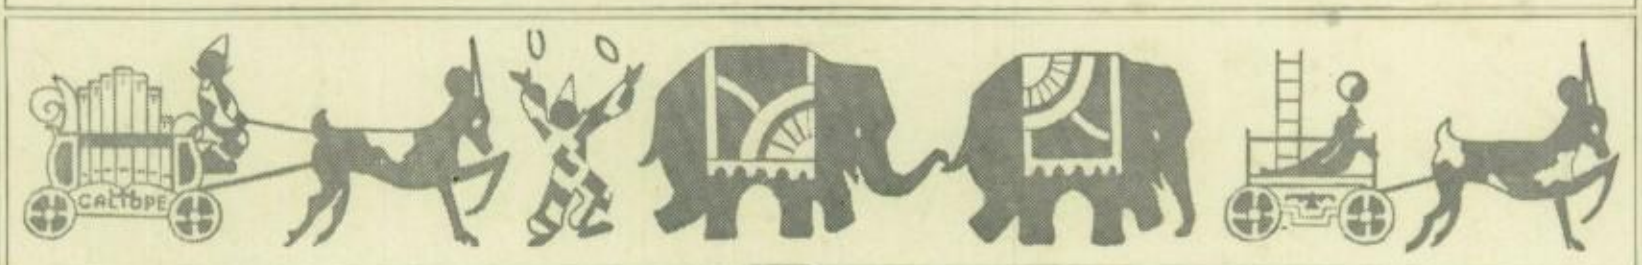
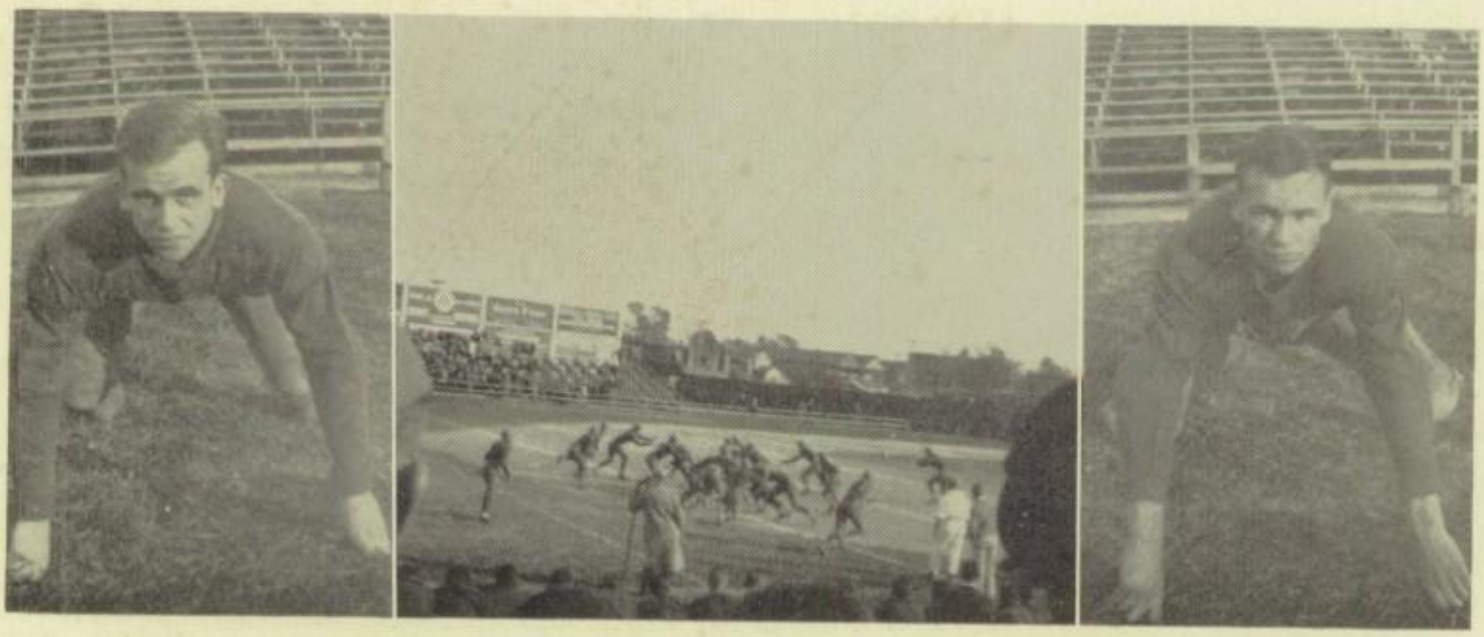
AS soon as school opened, a call for football men was issued. There was much material from which to select a team, but most of it was light in weight. There were only two letter-men back, but with these and the new material, our Coach, Mr. Fletcher, immediately started to work.

Our team was very light, so at the first of the season the Commodores did not succeed so well. As the season advanced, however, the team gained strength in every line. Under the constant drilling, inflicted upon the squad by the Coach, the team was whipped into fine shape. Finally the tactics used during the earlier part of the year began to reap surprising results.





The spirit displayed by the Commodores in the face of defeat has never been surpassed in the history of the school. Various clubs among the pupils, organized at the beginning of the term, supported the eleven so faithfully that the team was given renewed strength with which to meet other opponents.

Although the Commodores failed to win a single conference victory, they were the only team in the league to score a touchdown against the undefeated Newport News eleven, and were one of the two teams to cross the last chalk line against Roanoke, the 1928 Scholastic Champions.

Basket Ball

AFTER the close of the football season on Thanksgiving Day, Coach Fletcher called the basket ball candidates together for the winter court campaign. Three letter-men from the previous year contested successfully for their former positions; several promising new men on the squad competed for the other two places.

Several practice games were played in December, just before the regular court schedule began. Maury faced eighteen opponents during the season, and won ten games out of the eighteen. The Commodores played six conference games, two each with Petersburg High School, Newport News High School, and Woodrow Wilson High School. The Maury boys were able to take the contests with Petersburg High School without difficulty, but found the Newport News Shipbuilders the best team developed by their friendly rivals across Hampton Roads in a number of years. Two fast and exciting games were played with the latter team, victory in each case going to the Shipbuilders. The court battles with Woodrow Wilson High School resulted in a victory and a defeat for each team, Maury winning the first contest by a score of 21 to 15, and losing the final battle with a score of 31 to 32. The Commodores took second place in District 1.

Baseball

THE first meeting of the baseball candidates was held in February. There were very few letter-men present, but the new candidates came out in great numbers. The work of practicing the art of playing ball was started immediately. The Coach soon discovered that among the new arrivals he had much good material from which to select a team. This was eventually whipped into shape to be one of the best teams Maury has ever produced.

The players showed marked ability, which they later proved, and they were most enthusiastic about their work and the outcome of the season. It is doubtful whether the determination displayed by the men has been surpassed by any of their predecessors. The whole school was affected by the influence of the team. The spirit displayed by the entire student body in supporting the nine was such that those who come after us will endeavor to measure up to the standard which has been set.

Under the able leadership of our Coach, who has shown marked ability in leading the men to victory, a team was produced which made the entire school proud to give their most loyal support. The equipment, which was appropriated by the Athletic Association of the school, proved an invaluable addition to the nine, which we expect to win the State Championship.

Track

WHEN the first meeting of track men was called an unusually large number reported. Work for the coming season was started immediately, under the supervision of Mr. Gehrke, Maury Track Coach. The team progressed rapidly and made a favorable showing in the several track meets undertaken.

The squad was fairly strong in both track and field events, especially so in the former, with a few of the sprint and middle-distance letter-men of the previous year back.

The two important track meets of the season, the first at Williamsburg on April 26, bringing together entries from Woodrow Wilson, Hampton, Newport News, South Norfolk, Petersburg, John Marshall and Maury, and the State Championship meet at Charlottesville on May 4, with high school entries from all parts of the State, are severe tests of the calibre of our track athletes.

The student body is confident that the track team, under the leadership of Mr. Gehrke, will prove successful.

Tennis

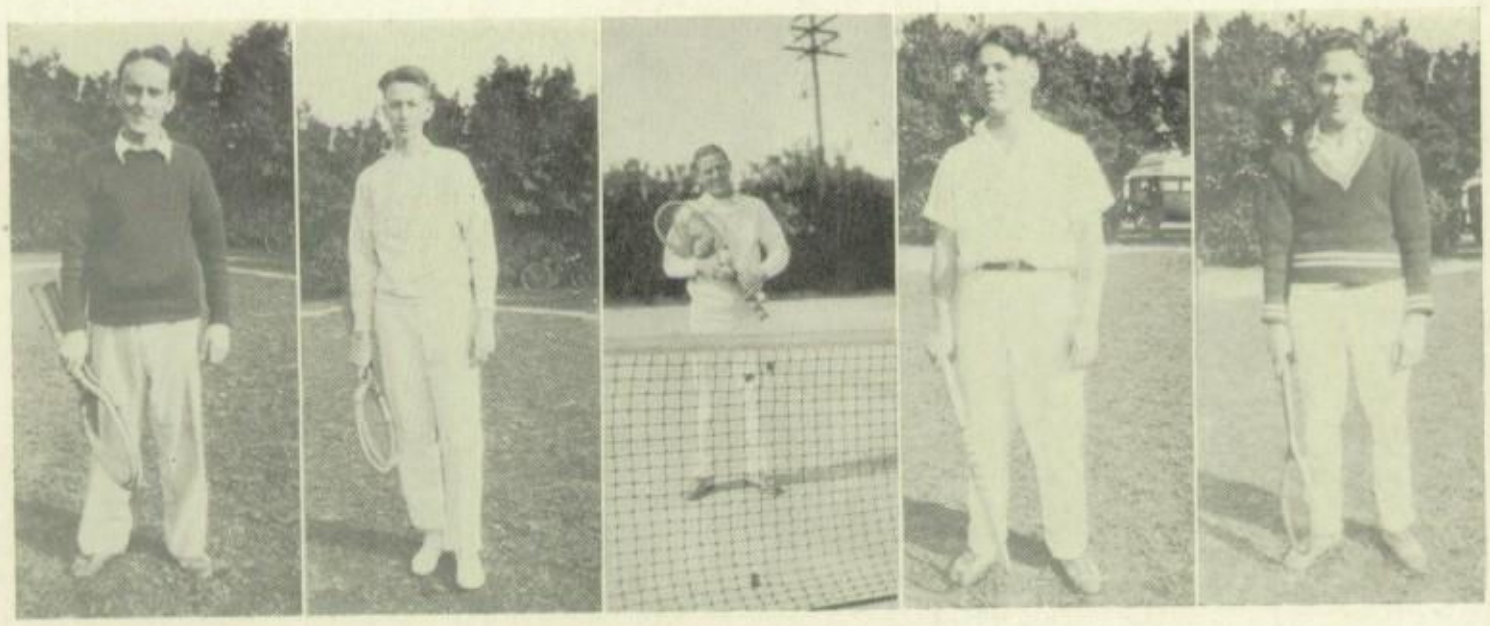
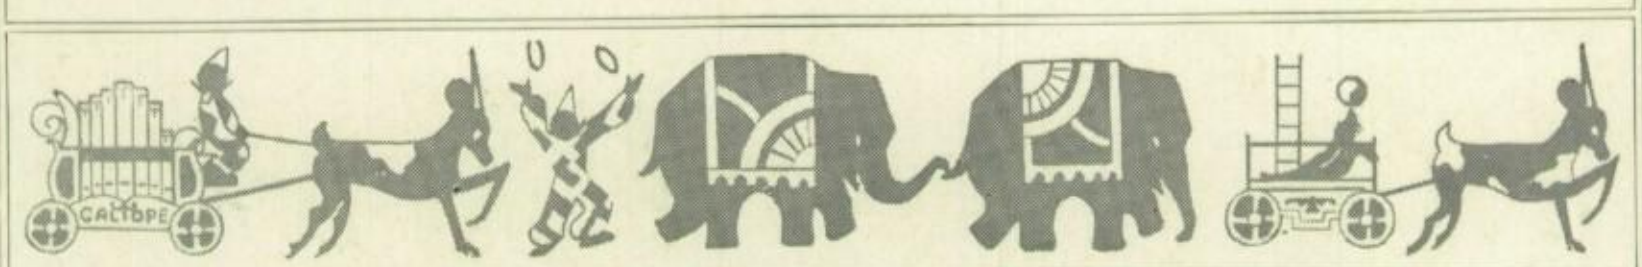
OVER twenty aspirants for court honors responded to the call for try-outs at the Westover Club for the Maury Tennis Team. Captain Montague, Sidney Hughes, Charles Thayer, and Kirwan Lawless, all of the 1928 racquet squad, formed the back-bone of the team. After consistent practice under the tutelage of Coach "Teddy" Penzold, the squad was ready for the season contests. They exhibited the same high standard of tennis that has brought the State doubles championship to Maury High School for the past two years.





Three Cheers

THE real athlete realizes that "playing the game" means more than just winning. The true ideal is not just a development of bone and sinew, but of "quickness, skill, courage, manliness, pluck, energy, and endurance."

This season a spirit was developed at Maury which surpassed that of other years. It was strongest at the losing games and brought with it such a feeling of "do or die" as was never seen before. For this attitude we thank each boy that has spent hours on the field in hard training for his Alma Mater, and we congratulate each team for putting forth such splendid efforts and doing so admirably under trying difficulties. Three cheers for you, our athletes, and for "that something" which you have given to our school year!

This Book

WILL be treasured by you as a record of the golden days of youth; of events large and small that will be thus recalled in later years and always with delight; of friendships that will remain forever green.

It will be the magic door through which you need only to pass; to step from age into youth! To us whose privilege it was to have a large and pleasant part in its making, this book will always be a reminder of the many friendships that grew and multiplied in this building.

And so we extend to the Class our heartiest congratulations and to those of you whom we came to know best, Adios! Hasta la vista!

¶ It has been our pleasure to again serve a staff of "The Commodore" in this, the twenty-first volume.

¶ Appealing, as it does, to the intellectual, there is no class of work that demands more uniform quality than printing and advertising for Educational Institutions.

¶ It is our ideal to construct a book that will be a real monument to that intangible thing called school spirit and to work with the staff in a spirit of mutual helpfulness and co-operation.
